

Update 1/11/2009:

Written by Serenity

Sunday, 11 January 2009 15:00 - Last Updated Tuesday, 13 January 2009 09:48

- New remort wizard ability: plane of resurgence.

- All followers now have a chance to avoid the standard prevention incurred by a successful sustain life. See 'help affect: sustained life' for details.

Plane of resurgence:

Usage: plane of resurgence <follower>

Plane of resurgence is a planar prevention ability that is only applicable on the followers of the user.

When properly used, plane of resurgence grants the specified follower with sustained life. The percentage and duration of sustained life is based on the user's skill % and constitution, respectively.

Sustained life on followers behaves differently than on NPCs or PCs. In particular, a follower's sustained life does not automatically invalidate itself, for a short period of time, after one death as it does with both NPCs and PCs. Instead, a check against the followers willpower is made and if the check is passed, the follower is allowed to sustain life again. If the check is failed, the follower is not allowed to sustain life for some short period of time.

It has been rumored that this ability improves in power for users who exceed 100% ability mastery.