

Human

Written by Serenity

Tuesday, 08 January 2008 02:25 - Last Updated Tuesday, 08 January 2008 20:27

While the human at first seems to be the most simple and the weakest of all existing Nodekian races, there is much more to these creatures than meets the eye. Underneath the fleshy exterior of these austere beings is the ability to ascend to greatness and the ability to fall to tremendous power.

The human who chooses to ascend to the next level of existence and chooses the path of heavenly power will find peace and harmony amongst the clouds. They acquire beautiful wings of fantastic power and a control of the divine light that few will ever know or experience. These are truly the most holy of beings ever known.

However, the human who chooses the fall from grace, and chooses the path of the darkness finds themselves granted with power beyond imagination. Deep in the heart of places most foul, the human is malformed into a creature of such evil, few will even speak its name. They gain the strength of an army, a vicious spiked tail, and wings of malicious power. The more aged of these beasts gain a control of dark energies so deadly, some have been known to destroy themselves trying to control it.

These are the true paths of the human. While they are born crude and simplistic beings, their lives are predestined to wield the power of the light or bring the fury of the darkness. You would do well to remember this, for the human you push aside today could return as the angel who saves your soul, or the demon who devours it tomorrow.